Start Quest
A dwarven sage named Benestrin asks the party to reclaim a lost family heirloom from the depths of Naigoon Chaget. This heirloom is a silver sword with, if they succeed, the ability to cast a powerful spell that creates a powerful shield for them to keep on their bodies.
Below the City
Benestrin takes the party to a large dwarven mausoleum below the city that spirals deep into the earth. At the very bottom is a naturally carved tunnel.
"At the end of that tunnel lies Naigoon Chaget. I'm afraid I must leave you here, as it becomes more dangerous the deeper you delve into the mountain."
Head into tunnel
Ask a Question
Ask Benestrin A Question
"Of course, adventurer. What would you like to know?"
What might we find in Naigoon Chaget?
What are we looking for?
Nevermind.
What might be found in Naigoon Chaget
"Naigoon Chaget is an ancient temple below our city in the heart of the mountain. Evil creatures can inhabit it. Expect magical traps. Though the temple is ruined and infested with monsters, the fountains inside may still possess curative properties."
Quest reminder
"Look for a sword hilt of dwarven make. It likely won't have a blade anymore, but the hilt should stand the test of time. It may be in the deepest, darkest chambers of Naigoon Chaget."
Goodbye, Benestrin
"Good luck adventurers. Be on your guard!"
Approach Naigoon Chaget
This goes on for several minutes then opens up to a very large open cavern with pools to the right and left, many sharp stalagmites and stalagtites, and large, grotesque facade of a gateway adorned with large carvings of snakes. The gateway has a large stone double door.
Try the Door
Look Around
Look Around
A player who spends the time nothing their surroundings gets the feeling they are being watched. They see something move just beneath the surface of one of the pools.
Try the Door
Investigate Pool
Try the Door
A player can open the door on a STR roll of 4 or higher. If multiple players push the door at the same time they automatically succeed. The scraping of the stone door alerts the troglodytes in the pools.
Investigate Pool
Hope the player investigates the pool is up to their imagination. Them may take a closer look, or toss in a rock, or barge blindly with an attack. However they player investigates, it will rile up the troglodytes lurking below the pools and they will attack!
Go in the chapel and close door
Try Diplomacy
Fight Troglodytes
Try Diplomacy
A player can close the door with a STR roll of 4 or higher. If multiple players push the door close at the same time they automatically succeed. On a fail, a troglodyte makes one attack on the player closing the door before the door closes.
The troglodytes hiss and scratch at the door for a minute before all is quiet.
Exit the Dungeon
Try Diplomacy
Amphibious humanoids wielding primitive spears rise from the pools, gurgling croak-like growls. The amount of troglodytes that appear equal one plus the number of players in the party. Troglodytes are unintelligent and hostile creatures, and handling this encounter diplomatically will take a CHA roll of 6 or higher. Bad rolls will result in the troglodytes attacking the party anyway. If the party succeeds, they handled diplomatically, they will peacefully go back to their pools, so they are ahead of what's in Naigoon Chaget. One troglodyte lingers, and will ask the players to bring back a thief who went missing in Naigoon Chaget, she will reward the party with a healing potion that has one use of healing 1d4 HP if they bring the troglodyte thief to the Medusa chamber (level or above).
If the player fails their CHA roll, the troglodytes attack!
If player succeeded in handling the troglodytes diplomatically and haven't opened the door, they can open the door on a STR roll of 4 or higher. If multiple players push the door at the same time they automatically succeed.
Troglodyte Encounter
Amphibious humanoids wielding primitive spears rise from the pools, gurgling croak-like growls. The amount of troglodytes that appear equal one plus the number of players in the party.
When one troglodyte remains, it will attempt to flee back into the pool on its turn.
If players haven't opened the door, they can open the door on a STR roll of 4 or higher. If multiple players push the door at the same time they automatically succeed.
Loot those bodies!
Troglodyte Loot
The troglodytes appear to be naked and carrying nothing with them but their primitive spears. The spears may be taken and used as weapons, or as pole but provide no value in combat.
Enter Naigoon Chaget
Naigoon Chaget - Entrance
The players enter a dark stone hall with a large carving of an eye on the opposite wall, with a large emerald in the center of the eye. To the left is a door flanked by statues of bows. To the right is a door flanked by statues of snakes. Below the eye carving is an inscription: "Take that emerald, and the wrath of the serpent queens will be upon you!" Adventurers who do not turn back must choose their fate: face the sting of the flying beast, or avoid the petrifying gaze of the serpent queens."
Take that emerald
Take That Emerald
The large red-eyed emerald is embedded into the stone in the pupil of the big eye carving. It's about the size of a fist, and it's worth a considerable amount of money if the party can imagine it. Depending on what the players come up with, you may ask them to make a star roll if they attempt to do something difficult, if the players fail to obtain the emerald, they still have authorin to through the door on the left or the door on the right.
Fail to obtain emerald
Obtain the emerald
Naigoon Chaget - Entrance with an emerald in hand
The players obtain the large emerald. The chamber rumbles for a second or two, dislodged dust from the ceiling, but nothing else happens. Upon leaving, the players may proceed to the door on the left or the door on the right.
NOTE: Taking the emerald triggers an alternate beginning to the Beholder encounter at the end of the dungeon. If the players have the emerald and survive the adventure, they get an additional Experience Point.
Go through the iron door on the left
Go through the snake door on the right
Naigoon Chaget - Manticore Lair
Passing through the iron doors the players enter a large dark chamber with supporting columns (which can be used as cover). Bones litter the floor. There is a wooden door on the right wall. The players hear a growl and there a roar as a manticore pounces. Start combat! See the manticore stat block at the end of this document. The manticore will flee into the air if threatened by melee. If it persists, the creature is dark, players may retrieve the hex from its collar. If the hex is broken, the collar falls off the manticore, will not pursue, go it is too large to fit through the door
Naigoon Chaget - Medusa Statue Puzzle Room
Passing through the snake doors the players enter another dark chamber with five statues. Four identical medusa statues each stand in a 2x2 grid in the room. These medusa statues are facing different directions and have bundles on their sides indicating they can be rotated by hand. The fifth statue is of a frightened troglodyte that stands between the nearest medusa statue on the left and the nearest medusa statue on the right. It clutches a bag of fish to its chest. The troglodyte statue is positioned so that it is looking at the medusa to its front, from the next room. The nearest medusa statue on the left is gazing at the frightened troglodyte statue. The nearest medusa statue on the right is facing the right wall. The far medusa statue on the left is facing the left wall. The far medusa statue on the right is facing glowing green and the statue seems to be humming. The far medusa statue on the right is facing the opposite wall at a 45 degree angle. There is a stone door on the left wall that has no handle or key hole. Medusa statues can be rotated if a players rolls 2 or higher on a STR roll, or if multiple characters turn a single statue they automatically succeed. Players must rotate the statues to face the right direction to open the door. The statues are interactive and interactive on the app (easier to solve). The door on the left opens when all four medusa statues are facing each other without the troglodytes statue blocking their gaze; they should be facing lets corner like and B, or the party can destroy the troglodytes statue and have the medusa statues all looking either clockwise or counter clockwise. If a medusa statue is looking at the troglodyte statue, the troglodyte turns to face the gaze. If a medusa statue without any stone cover, that player will turn to stone and can't move or take any action in the game. If a player tries to move a petrified player they must roll a 6 on a STR. If they fail the player gains a level of petrification. If they succeed, they get a 5 check to free the statue which shatters, and kills the petrified player. If players are struggling, with the puzzle, let's put a riddle on the wall to give a clue!
Go to door on the right
Go back to Narthex Chamber
Go through door on the left
Naigoon Chaget - Manticore Antechamber
If the players try the wooden door without the key, it is locked, and they'll have to look around for a key (it's on the manticore's collar). The wooden door may also be broken down with a STR roll of 14 or higher. This antechamber contains a fountain with water spouting from the mouth of a lion statue. The fountain is fed by a pipe that runs down from the tower. This antistatic well either heal all poison damage, resolved in the manticore bottle to players who imbibe. OR it will clear the poison condition. Stone steps wind down to another chamber, below with a stone door that is not locked.
Proceed down the stairs
Naigoon Chaget - Medusa Antechamber
The chamber beyond the medusa statue room contains a fountain with water coming from a crying medusa statue, with hands covering her eyes, with a pitcher nearby. There's an inscription on the pitcher: "Revive the troglodyte, and he will reward you!" Stone steps are on a petrified stone player will revive them. Players can have water carrying vessels in their pockets. Players may even pour the water on the troglodytes statue. Stone steps wind down to another chamber below with a stone door that is not locked.
Proceed down the stairs
Revive the Troglodyte
Naigoon Chaget - Return to Medusa Chamber
The party can revive the troglodyte statue using water from the fountain. The troglodyte can not be revived if its statue was shattered. If the troglodyte is revived, he is frightened, and dismayed to find his silver bag of fish has gone rotten. The players can fight the troglodyte, attempt to bring him back to his tribe outside Naigoon Chaget, or persuade him to join them on their quest.
Recruit the Troglodyte
Fight the troglodyte
Return the Troglodyte to his tribe
Naigoon Chaget - Troglodyte Joins the Party
A play must make roll a 4 or higher on a CHA roll to successfully recruit the troglodyte. If the roll fails, the troglodyte will flee deeper into the dungeon into the beholder chamber. If the party succeeds at recruiting the troglodyte, the troglodyte is under the bees control and will help the party in combat for the rest of the adventure.
Naigoon Chaget - Return to the Troglodyte
A play must make roll a 4 or higher on a CHA roll to successfully convince the troglodyte to come peacefully back to his tribe. If they fail this roll, the troglodyte will flee deeper into the dungeon into the beholder chamber.
Troglodyte joins the party
Troglodyte flees
Troglodyte flees
Troglodyte convince to come peacefully
Naigoon Chaget - Troglodyte Flees
The troglodyte flees toward the beholder chamber. The party can follow or attack it before it reaches the beholder chamber.
Follow
Attack!
Naigoon Chaget - troglodyte thief Combat
Roll for turn orders. This should be a quick battle. The thief doesn't carry any valuables. It appears the thief stole coins from from his tribe and tried to hide in Naigoon Chaget. From here the party can delve deeper into the dungeon or inform the troglodytes outside about the fate of their thief.
Continue into the dungeon
Go back to troglodytes outside
Complete optional quest
The same troglodyte is lurking in the shadows outside Naigoon Chaget, but isn't hostile. She asks the party if they found the thief; she must see the body—dead or alive—before rewarding the party. She will give the party one healing potion.
Healing Potion - use in or out of combat. to restore 4HP. Roll one dice and recover that many HP. Once used, the potion consumed and the bottle is empty. In combat using the potion on oneself is an ally takes up your turn.
From here, the players can proceed into the beholder chamber, or explore the manticore chamber.
Naigoon Chaget - Beholder Chamber Combat, triggered by troglodyte
The players follow the fleeing troglodyte into the beholder chamber. This final chamber of the dungeon is oval drum shaped; with clusters of stone eyes carved all around the room. At the back of the room is a treasure chest. When the troglodyte runs in, he is immediately petrified by the gaze of the beholder. The troglodyte's body falls to the floor. The beholder is accompanied by Floating Eyes (minions), equal to the amount of players in the adventure. Combat begins. See the beholder and Floating eye stat blocks. Try rolling different initiatives for the two different monster types. If the beholder dies, the remaining floating eyes flee. The beholder has one eyestalk per player, which can be severed if it takes 2 damage. After the beholder is defeated, the players are free to loot the chest.
Naigoon Chaget - Beholder Chamber
The final chamber of the dungeon. is oval drum shaped; with clusters of stone eyes carved all around the room. In the back of the room is a treasure chest. If a player interacts with the chest, the beholder "wakes up" and the chest turns into its mouth. Upon looks at the ceiling, they can spot the beholder. before it attacks.
Inspect the Chest
Look around
Naigoon Chaget - Beholder Chamber Combat
If a player interacts with the chest. Settrin the beholder floats down from the ceiling. If a player looks at the ceiling, they can spot Settrin the beholder before it descends. "You may trade for my treasure, with your hoard." Bethrin is accompanied by Floating Eyes (minions) equal to the amount of players in the adventure. Combat begins. See the beholder and floating eye stat blocks. Try rolling different initiatives for the two different monster types. If the beholder dies, the remaining floating eyes flee. The beholder has one eyestalk per player, which can be severed if it takes 2 damage. After the beholder is defeated, the players are free to loot the chest
Beholder chamber
manticore chamber
Open the treasure chest
Naigoon Chaget - Treasure and Exit
The treasure chest contains a silver-sword hilt of dwarven design. DMs can add an item the players can use once we are much higher. Players can easily exit the dungeon for the sake of brevity.
Exit Quest
Players can easily return to the dwarf city for the sake of brevity. After returning the hilt to Benestrin he is grateful, and commissions Jiwarven blacksmiths to make a magical shield to reward the adventurers. This shield gives a character one extra die to roll when defending from attacks.
This concludes the adventure! Ask the players how they feel about it. What did they like? What did they not like?